* At London School of Arts, we are confident that adhering to social distancing in building as well as in the classes, with all the necessary protocols in place, will be challenging yet manageable.

* New timetables for group lessons will allow longer breaks between so studios can be cleaned between each session.

* We have increased hygiene schedules and handwashing and there will be more hand sanitisers around the building.

* For the foreseeable future, there will be no large gatherings for music performances, and we will need to reduce the number of visitors into the school building.

Exams are still going ahead as planned. In case of any cancellations, we will let you know via the app or our website.
